

What can we do for you?

Public Health Nurses (PHNs) provide health and social services to families with children from the prenatal period through school-age as well as to adults with chronic medical conditions.

Public Health Nurses and Community Health Specialists provide case management for the families and individuals referred to the program.

Case management helps families to achieve the best health possible, to develop the skills needed to be physically and socially healthy, and to meet their basic needs.

Case managers work in cooperation with the family to develop a service plan which identifies their strengths, risks, and needs.
